

HISTORIC HEROINES OF SHAWNIGAN LAKE

Alice Ravenhill

Minna Gildea

Paige Henry Shawnigan Lake Museum

October is Women's History Month, and the Shawnigan Lake Museum is taking this opportunity to highlight women who shaped our community. Alice Ravenhill and Minna Gildea are two such women Shawnigan is proud to call their own.

Alice Ravenhill

Born in Snaresbrook, England, in 1859, Alice Ravenhill had a quintessentially strict Victorian childhood. Despite this-and the illness that would afflict her throughout her life- she dedicated herself to promoting health and welfare.

Alice became one of the first women to take a new diploma course offered by the National Health Society. It taught anatomy, hygiene, first aid, and dietetics, and included nine months of tending to infirmity patients.

So began an extensive career of lecturing, meticulous research, and publications about health, sanitation, and childcare. Alice contributed her expertise to schools, colleges, and other institutions across Europe and America. Her career was halted several times by various ailments, but her determination and compassion never faltered.

At age 51, Alice followed her brother, sister, and nephew to Shawnigan Lake to start a new life of homesteading. The wilds of Canada presented numerous trials, but the Ravenhills soon became active members of the community.

Alice continued to pursue home economics. She travelled around B.C., lecturing and writing papers for the province's Women's Institutes.

In 1926, the Women's Institute asked Alice to research First Nations designs for rugs. As she explored the collections at the British Columbia Provincial Museum, she developed a fascination with Native arts and culture. She began lecturing on the subject, and wrote three books detailing her findings about the lives of B.C.'s Native people.

In 1948, Alice received an Honorary Doctor of Science degree from the University of British Columbia. She advocated both home economics and awareness of Native culture until her death in 1954.

Minna Gildea

Wilhelmina "Minna" Gildea was born in 1875 in the English village of West Lulworth. Her parents were well-off but humble, and taught their children the importance of responsibility and service. These values were a driving force in Minna's future career.

Minna took teacher's training at Cheltenham Ladies' College in western England.

She excelled in her studies and took her first teaching position in Nova Scotia. After teaching at several other schools in Canada and England, she decided to start her own.

With encouragement from Shawnigan School headmaster C.W. Lonsdale and Forest Inn proprietress Mrs. Mason-Hurley, she bought the former Strathcona Lodge and opened it as a girls' boarding school in 1927.

At a time when women were expected to be docile and demure, Minna challenged social norms with her strong and eccentric personality. Accounts from the "Old Girls" of Strathcona remark on her self-confidence ("She didn't walk so much as she strode"); her brilliant mind; and her humour. She resolved to create a family environment in the school, and often invited students to her study to discuss personal matters. She was also an incredible orator, and read books and newspapers aloud on Sunday evenings.

Above all, Minna emphasized the importance of thinking for oneself, forging one's own identity, and contributing to society. She taught her girls that, as privileged and educated members of the future generation, they had a duty to use their strengths for the greater good.

Minna remained headmistress of Strathcona until her passing in 1950.

Alice and Minna are just two of countless women who enriched Shawnigan - and elsewhere - with their wisdom, compassion, and dedication. They took chances and pursued their ambitions, heedless of the prejudices of the time.

Join us at the Shawnigan Lake Museum to learn more about the laudable ladies who shaped our history.

2020 has been a strange and challenging year to say the least, but for those of us who live in Shawnigan we have so much to be grateful for in a year where it might be difficult to find things to feel thankful for...

- ★ the luxury of the great outdoors in our backyard... which makes it easier for us to cope with the social restrictions imposed due to COVID.
- ★ the local businesses that have stepped up to be open and support the community.
- ★ access to our beautiful lake to fish, boat and swim. It was a very busy year for fisher people, boaters, kayakers and skiers.
- ★ a safe place for firefighting planes to load.
- ★ It's a great place to work from home.
- ★ The kind neighbours and community members who go out of their way to help others.
- ★ More time to slow down and enjoy...

South Cowichan Library

The South Cowichan Library in the Mill Bay Centre is now open with limited services. The bookdrop always open and the library is open for Walkthrough service for four hours each Tuesday through Saturday.

Up to four customers at a time are allowed in. There are designated "stations" to use so please just make sure the way to the next location is clear before you move forward. You can browse a small collection of novels, DVDs, magazines, CDs, children's items, nonfiction, and more. Check out our themed Grab & Go bags!

Holds and browsed items can be checked out at a touchless self-checkout machine, just bring your library card. We now offer a print station where you can go online just long enough to print what you need.

You can place your requests online at virl.bc.ca or by calling 250-743-5436. You'll get an automatic notification when your item arrives and then can come in with your library card to pick it up.

Tue: 1-3pm & 5-7pm
Wed to Sat: 10-12pm & 2-4pm

We're not yet able to offer a place to sit or a washroom. If you're not comfortable coming in, let us know and we'll arrange a time to meet us at the front door to pick up your items.

Items are quarantined 48 hours before being checked in. This will result in a delay in your returned items being removed from your account.

All overdue fines are waived at check-in.

If you need more help than you can get quickly during your visit, please call or email us at southcowichan@virl.bc.ca. We can help you place holds, order the next in a series, get started with eBooks, learn how to access on-line newspaper and magazines, and more!

Bicycle safety

Oriana Parker
SCCPAS

The COVID-19 pandemic has upended our daily lives. We are all scrambling to find better solutions to staying healthy and fit while adhering to restrictions on social distancing. Not surprisingly, the bicycle has gained enormous popularity as a means of travel and recreation. In some places, bicycle sales have gone up 600% and the cost has soared as well. Worries over the safety of public transportation is partly responsible for this surge. Technology and the availability of bike lanes and trails makes for a more pleasurable and rewarding ride. South Cowichan Community Policing would like to remind cyclists to make safety their number one priority before getting on the road.

- Make sure to give your bicycle a tune-up and safety check.
- ★ Always wear a helmet that's approved by CSA, ANSI or Snell.
 - ★ Make sure it fits properly.
 - ★ Use a headlight between dusk and dawn.
 - ★ Use a reflector on your rear fender and additional reflectors on pedals, shoes and clothing.
 - ★ Wear bright coloured clothing, with reflectors, especially after dark.
 - ★ Don't just be on the lookout for other cars and trucks, be sure to watch out for bikes too!

- ★ Don't wobble or weave in and out of traffic.
- ★ Always signal your intentions to stop, slow down or turn.
- ★ Keep as far to the right as practical.

LOOK OUT FOR: Rocks, potholes or loose pavement, puddles, glass, storm drains, utility covers, leaves, sand or gravel, grease spots on pavement, wet pavement.

There have been some very serious bicycle accidents in our community. A cyclist travels with the traffic not always knowing what type of vehicle is passing him. One cyclist received life threatening injuries when he was passed by a logging truck whose back end swayed and knocked him off his bike. Keep glancing into your rear mirror to see the traffic approaching. Happy cycling and please stay safe!!

Are you visible? Please stop by the South Cowichan Community Policing office to pick up reflectors as the nights are getting darker earlier – Be Visible and Be Seen.

South Cowichan Community Policing office is now located at 845 2B Deloume Road, Mill Bay, BC V0R 2P2 Phone: 250-929-7222

The Wild Side – Lobster Mushrooms

Dave Hutchinson
Shawnigan Focus

I've long been interested in identifying edible wild mushrooms but always hesitant to actually consume any without expert confirmation. Thankfully, there are many who do have the requisite knowledge. As a result, I have been lucky to feast on several species including Golden Chanterelles (Cantharellus formosus), Pines (Tricholoma murrillianum), and Shaggy Manes (Coprinus comatus).

A choice edible that I was unfamiliar with until recently is called the Lobster Mushroom. Interestingly, it is not an actual species but the result of a parasitic fungus (Hypomyces lactifluorum) infecting another mushroom, usually the Russula (Russula brevipes). The infection covers the host in a hard red-orange shell, and completely alters its consistency, flavour and shape. The colour resembles the outer shell of a cooked lobster, thus the name.

Encouraged by statements like “a good choice for novice foragers”, “there are no dangerous lookalikes”, and “the bright colour, size, and shape are distinctive”, I headed out, pail in hand. The early October weather was perfect and, after several lengthy but enjoyable excursions stumbling about in the bush, I was finally rewarded! Cleaned, sliced and fried in olive oil with garlic, they were delicious in an omelette and would be an excellent accompaniment to many dishes.

A Few Details:

- ★ Lobster mushrooms can be found from July to late October, depending on local and weekly weather conditions.
- ★ As with most mushrooms, wait for heavy rains followed by warm weather for a good time to go hunting.

To identify a lobster mushroom, look for the following:

- ★ Lobster mushrooms do not have gills.
- ★ Lobster mushrooms have a hard, rough exterior that is bright orange or red.
- ★ Lobster mushrooms are often broadly vase shaped,

Lobster Mushrooms (they are a distinctive bright red-orange).

with dirty and cracked tops.

- ★ Mature lobster mushroom “caps” become irregularly twisted or folded.
- ★ The inside of a lobster mushroom is white to orange-white, dense and hard.
- ★ In British Columbia, lobster mushrooms can grow in diverse habitats, but are usually found under conifer trees.
- ★ Only two host species are known in North America (Russula brevipes and Lactifluus piperatus). Both are edible but not sought after. David Arora who created the mushroomer’s bible “Mushrooms Demystified” declares the Russula “better kicked than picked”. The magic happens once properly infected when it becomes choice!

- ★ The size of the original host determines the one of the lobster mushroom. The most common ones have a height of 15 to 20 cm.

Look where the forest floor is loose enough for lobster mushrooms to push up from below. Keep an eye out for flashes of orange in the undergrowth.

If you find one lobster mushroom, scan around for more. Lobster mushrooms often grow in tight clusters of 2 or 3, with others growing up to 5 metres away.

Lobster mushrooms will often appear in the same area year after year, so make a note when you find some!

For any mushrooms that you gather for food it is mandatory to be 100% sure of identification before eating! As with many foods, some people may have allergies. There are many resources available.

Thank you Shawnigan Lake

Glenn White
Shawnigan Resident

Sometimes of late we can get caught up in the COVID issue and the implications of it on our lives and those of our family and friends...limiting our time to get together, more email notes, face time, phone calls etc.

In behind that back drop we also have a lot of amazing people in our community providing a helping hand to others: proceeding with new walking trails along the rail beds for our enjoyment, the many small businesses who are staying open and providing services from food and drinks to dispensing prescriptions, servicing our vehicles and those publishing our local paper.

We continue to see new people moving into our community and that is a good sign for our future. New developments will bring more new people and talent to our community as well as providing jobs in the construction industry.

Despite the down turn and the unfortunate loss of jobs for many people, the governments continue to support our community members with various forms of funding that allow people to maintain their homes and look after their family. Our medical community continues to provide support for us, sometimes using innovative ways such as phone consults and, when needed, we can still have surgeries done and actual office visits.

This makes me very happy to be living in such a community where we can all come together and support one another. Yes we still have to social distance and ensure we are not transmitting the spread of COVID but we also need to carry on our community work

This is my thank you to our community and to the people who volunteer, go to work and share with others in many ways that are generous and safe for all of us.

Road-ends revisited

New dock at the end of Norbury.

There have been some energetic conversations recently on the Shawnigan Events Facebook page about lake-front road-ends.

Nearby residents appropriating road-end lake frontage for private use has not changed much since we published this article in the October 2011 issue of the Focus.

There is growing indignation and some feel that all road-ends should be made available for public use. The resentment is understandable but it may be a mistake to develop more than a few for increased public access. Most should have the riparian area protected and left undisturbed. Natural shoreline is diminishing with property development. The health of our lake needs all the help it can get.

Road-Ends – Free Waterfront – No Taxes

Want a stretch of lakefront for free with no property tax? Grab yourself a road-end. Apparently, that's how some people think.

Shawnigan Lake has about 74 undeveloped road-ends located around the lake that are owned by the Ministry of Transportation and Infrastructure (MoTI). Many provide informal public access to the water or remain natural and undisturbed. Several though, have been audaciously appropriated for personal use.

As with a number of lake issues this appears to be something that falls through the cracks when it comes to jurisdiction. The CVRD currently has no authority. MoTI is only concerned with the roadway to the lakeshore. Transport Canada enforces the Navigable Waters Protection Act, which includes the surface of the lake, but they are reluctant to get involved with private docks, at road-ends or otherwise. Timberwest claims to have inherited foreshore and lakebed rights which were part of the original E&N Railway Land Grant. In 1997 there was an effort to implement a "Foreshore/Lakebed Lease Program" but it appears to have been in a legal quagmire since then.

Some locations, where the facilities are available for communal use, may have approval of the neighbourhood. This is rarely the case though and it must be an aggravation for adjacent property owners especially at property tax time. The problem has escalated over the years with an increasing population. Confrontations occur and it is not acceptable that there is no clear jurisdiction. Other concerns include unobstructed access for fire trucks, and liability issues.

The Shawnigan Lake Parks and Recreation Commission is looking at acquiring several key road-end areas which would be transferred to the CVRD as park-land (see related article). The remaining road-ends would still be an issue though. Local government is best positioned to regulate the matter and something should be done for it to obtain the required authority. A good start would be to investigate how other areas have handled the problem.

Feedback is welcomed on this article. Please send comments to: shawniganfocuseditor@gmail.com

Our Shawnigan Event Series

Sierra Acton
CVRD Director Area B

Connection, creativity and collaboration are important more than ever right now during this pandemic. Instead of another zoom meeting being added to anyone’s schedule, I am striving to create a different way of engaging community in local affairs by highlighting our community assets in an event format. Even when it was possible to gather on a Monday night on hard uncomfortable chairs at the Community Centre, it was surprisingly not well attended. For the first Our Shawnigan event, we will be hiking up Old Baldy Mountain. I hope you can join fellow neighbours and friends for a stroll up one of many valued community assets. Masks are not necessary but keeping a 2m distance from anyone not in your personal cohort is expected. The hike should take about 70 minutes.

Join us: October 18th in the morning.

Kindly RSVP: We are limiting the hike to 15 people, please email ILoveShawnigan@gmail.com

gan@gmail.com

Please note: We will be following full social distancing protocol. Proper footwear is recommended and, unfortunately, this event is not suitable for anyone with mobility issues nor children. Stay tuned for the 2nd event, if this is not your “Cup of tea” ... it won’t be a hike next time. Should you wish to help or offer up ideas, please connect.

Book Review

Marcy Green
Shawnigan Focus

Anxious People
Frederik Backman

Published by Simon & Schuster, Inc.

Copyright 2020 by Fredrik Backman

“This story is about a lot of things, but mostly idiots.” So begins Fredrik Backman’s description of his latest book.

“A Man Called Ove” was a great favourite of mine, the first in a string of best sellers by this Swedish author, and reviewed in this paper years ago. When I began to read this latest book, I struggled with the first part and felt frustrated and annoyed with the behaviour of the characters. In fact, I almost couldn’t finish. I’m so very glad I did.

The plot is simple. A desperate bank robber holds up a bank, only to find it’s cashless. The robber panics, runs across the street and barges into an apartment Open House. The prospective buyers are an older married couple, a wealthy banker, a young married couple expecting a baby and an elderly woman, all being inadequately handled by the flighty real estate woman. And then there’s the mystery man in the bathroom wearing only underpants and a large rabbit’s head.

These people are all held as hostages by the robber, making a very chaotic crew, indeed.

A father-son police team handles the hostage-taking from the ground, trying to stay a step ahead before the city police, the “Stockholmers”, are sent. The mystery develops when the bank robber disappears, leaving a gun and a blood-soaked floor, and the police cannot get any co-operation or coherence from the witnesses. It has by now all gone off the rails.

As the plot deepens we learn of the back story of each of these characters and another important theme emerges: suicide and a bridge, the same bridge seen from the balcony of the second floor apartment. A wise therapist then becomes another important character and the mood shifts from comedy to an honest look at fear and anxiety.

The reader is bounced from comedy to tragedy and back again, always with the gentle recognition of the everyday foibles of ordinary people. Backman is brilliant at shining a light on the quirkiness of human behaviour, but his real gift is in finding the connectedness and the humanity, too. We are not so very different from each other, after all.

One of the characters quotes Martin Luther King: “We plant an apple tree today, even if we know the world is going to be destroyed tomorrow.” The author’s message is clear. He knows we are all just bumbling through this life. But he is hopeful, and ends with this: “We save those we can.”

I huffed, laughed and cried, especially at the end. The addition of a biographical note did me in. This is one of my favourite books this year, in spite of the beginning.

Recommended for those who enjoy an author with the combination of a kind heart and a realistic view of the world. In Backman’s universe you can have both.

"Serving Shawnigan Lake and South Cowichan for over 20 years"

LEADER SONIA FURSTENAU

Cowichan Valley is an incredible place, full of people with exciting ideas and a deep love for the place they call home.

When we come together around the future that we all want, we can achieve great things.

Vote Sonia Furstenuau.

Vote for a stronger
Cowichan Valley.
